HOW TO GET UNLIMITED TRAVEL IN EUROPE FROM THE "NETFLIX OF AIRLINES"

News / Airlines, Business aviation

Surf Air, the travel startup that offers “all-you-can-fly” service to paying members, will begin running routes in Europe this October, Techcrunch reports.

Specifically, Surf Air’s subscription-based European routes will now include daily flights across Europe, including London to Cannes, Geneva, and Zurich.

The growing subscription-flight service is also planning weekend flights to warmer climes, like Ibiza. Surf Air is also growing its European service to Dublin, Paris, Amsterdam, and Barcelona in 2017, Techcrunch adds.

© 2015-2026 50SKYSHADES.COM — Reproduction, copying, or redistribution for commercial purposes is prohibited.

For roughly $2,700 a month, Surf Air's members can fly an unlimited number of times to European destinations, with friends-and-family passes running about about $850 one-way. Booking can be done either online or through Surf Air’s app.

If you're looking to travel in the U.S., Surf Air flies its subscribers to private airports near Los Angeles; San Francisco; Reno, NV; and Palm Springs and Napa, CA, Techcrunch reports. Similar services — often more app-based than subscription — like Blade in NYC, allow local on-demand air travel.

16 JULY 2016

SOURCE: REFINERY29
ARTICLE LINK:
https://virginia.50skyshades.com/news/airlines/how-to-get-unlimited-travel-in-europe-from-the-netflix-of-airlines

© 2015-2026 50SKYSHADES.COM — Reproduction, copying, or redistribution for commercial purposes is prohibited.