J&C Aero has completed a complex cabin interior modernization project for a Ukrainian charter air carrier SkyUp Airlines. The works covered the airline's twelve Boeing 737 NGs. J&C Aero's team has ensured the certification of new passenger seats, as well as has installed them together with new class dividers, carpets, entry area mats, and additional galley equipment. The company has also produced transition MOD kits and standardized emergency equipment, including the introduction of new-generation ZOLL Aviation defibrillators. In addition, J&C Aero has developed and installed the fleet's new livery and internal marking.

"SkyUp Airlines is a modern carrier with a mindset focused on delivering additional comfort to its international passengers. We are happy to support them with fleet modernization and look forward to future projects as they keep growing," commented Vitalijus Malyška, the COO at J&C Aero.

"As a charter airline, we welcome various passenger groups on board our aircraft. The recent cabin interior modernization has allowed us to further improve the flight experience, and for that, we are grateful to J&C Aero that delivered everything on time and as requested," shared a SkyUp Airlines' representative.
